Harnessing the Value in Co-Creating and Keeping Inclusive Healthy Places: A Workshop

DRAFT AGENDA
February 6, 2020
New York City

WORKSHOP OBJECTIVES:
Placemaking is the work of creating livable, vibrant, or quality places, especially public places, and draws on community development, arts and culture, regional planning, and civic engagement, combining different disciplinary perspectives into a creative way of shaping public spaces, land use, commerce, transportation, housing, and social fabric. Harmful consequences of placemaking include gentrification and displacement, racial and socioeconomic exclusion, and lack of resident leadership. The workshop will:
(1) examine the economics of inclusive placemaking and place-keeping;
(2) describe how inclusive placemakers gather resources to do their work; and
(3) explore the social and economic value that can be generated when places are designed with health, equity, and well-being in mind.
