

“It’s just a feeling on the inside of you that’s good”: What qualitative research can tell us about community perspectives on public safety

Megan Comfort, PhD
Senior Fellow
(she/her)

Transformative Research Unit for Equity (TRUE)

Systems intersections

Liminal identities & sense of community

Who is deemed deserving of safety?

What identities do people bring to research?

Building the trustworthiness of research(ers)

Photo: research report-back
conducted by Tazima Jenkins

RTI Press Publication No. OP-0085-2301.
<https://doi.org/10.3768/rtipress.2023.op.0085.2301>

1

What safety could be

“Just getting my housing I feel more like a person, you know what I mean, it’s a different thing when you wake up on the streets, being on the streets, than coming out your home and going to the street. You know, it’s just a feeling on the inside of you that’s good.”

Thank you!

Megan Comfort
mcomfort@rti.org