

Building on what you heard from our presenters, spend some time in your groups discussing three (3) points that will become part of the proceedings of this Workshop:

Session V:

What would it take for individuals and communities to be empowered to improve their oral health and have equitable access to oral health services?

1. “What are some “empowerment” strategies that would give you confidence that individuals and communities will have equitable access to oral health services?”
2. Identify what resources would be required to ensure access based on the strategies suggested.
3. Are there specific policy changes that could support promising practices toward equitable access to oral health strategies? Consider policy at the Federal, State, and Local level, as well in professional and/or organizational levels.

Building on what you heard from our presenters, spend some time in your groups discussing three (3) points that will become part of the proceedings of this Workshop:

Session VI:

What would it take for health educators and providers to work together to incorporate oral health services into whole person care?

1. What are some promising educational models are driving efforts toward meaningful oral and systemic health integration?
2. Identify what resources would be required to ensure access based on the strategies suggested.
3. Are there specific policy changes that could support promising practices toward equitable access to oral health strategies? Consider policy at the Federal, State, and Local level, as well in professional, and/or organizational levels.

Building on what you heard from our presenters, spend some time in your groups discussing three (3) points that will become part of the proceedings of this Workshop:

Session VII:

What would it take for public and private payers to invest in equitable oral health services?

1. What are some promising educational models are driving efforts toward meaningful oral and systemic health integration?
2. Identify what resources would be required to ensure access based on the strategies suggested.
3. Are there specific policy changes that could support promising practices toward equitable access to oral health strategies? Consider policy at the Federal, State, and Local level, as well in professional, and/or organizational levels.