OPEN SESSION

SEMINAR ON CRIMINAL AND JUVENILE JUSTICE PROSECUTION

This seminar will provide the Committee on Law and Justice (CLAJ), invited guests, and others with a forum to discuss a framework for the development of future research pertinent to the prosecution of crime and delinquency. In 2001 after convening a workshop, the Committee on Law and Justice (CLAJ) published a report on What's Changing in Prosecution? As it has been 17 years since the National Academies undertook activities specifically addressing the prosecution of crime, this is an appropriate time for the Committee to explore past and current research and hear from prosecutors, researchers, policy makers, and others about the needs of the field.
