Roundtable on Population Health Improvement Workshop #5: Resources for Population Health Improvement

February 6, 2014

Location: Keck Center, Room 100 • 500 Fifth Street, NW, Washington, DC

“Resources” refers to many different kinds of essential ingredients needed to support the improvement of population health. Resources could be financial, human (workforce and associated education and training needs), or informational (referring to data, technology, networks, etc.) and could also refer to the broad category of assets that communities bring to the table, from social capital to cultural diversity.

The workshop will focus on financial resources, and especially on varied private sector funding sources and mechanisms that can help alter the social and environmental determinants of health.
