

Engaging the Public in a Just and Equitable Energy Transition: A Webinar Series

Public Responses to Large-scale Net-zero Infrastructure: Research Perspectives

Speaker Biographies

Hilary Boudet, Oregon State University

Hilary Boudet is an Associate Professor and Associate Director of Graduate Programs at the School of Public Policy at Oregon State University. She teaches courses on energy and society, social movements, policy theory, and research methods. Her research interests include environmental and energy policy, natural resource sociology, social movements, and public participation in energy and environmental decision-making.

Patrick Devine-Wright, University of Exeter

Patrick Devine-Wright's research has been ranked in the world's top 1% of social science by citation in 2019, 2020 and 2021 (Web of Science). With expertise spanning Human Geography and Environmental Psychology, he conducts theoretically-driven research with real-world implications, often in interdisciplinary and transdisciplinary settings. Across local, regional, national and international contexts, he is engaged in efforts to ensure social science insights inform decision making on a range of environmental challenges, notably climate change.